is now ready for delivery, containing the proceedings of the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati. It is a cheap and large campaign paper.

Is an absolute refusal to comply with the stipulations of article ten of the Ashburton treaty by Great Britain the kind of notice usual among nations of a desire to abrogate or discontinue a treaty?

WE PERCEIVE that the State Associations Committee have called upon all the Republican organizations of the District to meet to night to ratify the Cincinnati nominations. We regret that the committee would not consent to await the return of delegates to Cincinnati and until the citizens of the District could arrange to take part with

IT APPEARS that the last sixty-one votes which determined the contest in favor of Haves upon the seventh ballot were cast by the New York delegation at the request of their own candidate, Senator Conkling. When the delegation was called in regular course it made a request to have leave to retire for consultation, and during that consultation communicated with the distinguished Senstor.

Now THAT our family preferences are determined, and the recognized leaders of the party for the next campaign are chosen, it may not be amiss to congratulate ourselves as a party upon the elements of true greatness exhibited by those distinguished Republicans who have been put forward by their own! States and their friends in other nation's gift. All those preferred had warm, ardent, earnest friends who adhered to them unflinchingly until their names were withdrawn or the contest ended. Maine and Illinois voted steadily for Blaine. New York adhered unswervingly to Conkling, Pennsylvania to Hartrauft, Ohio to Hayes, Indiana to Morton, and Kentucky to Bristow. But when it was seen that the question must be narrowed down to two, Conkling, Morton, Hartranft and Bristow, with a self-abnegation and true natriotism, which reflects the highest honor upon them, all gracefully withdrew in favor of the man who had been steadily advancing in strength from the first ballot, and to whom we were bound to look for our "great gun" of victory in October. None but men truly great are capable of thus tossing from them the temptations incident to power. These gentlemen can console themselves with the fact that the old adage which became so common in the days of Clay, Calhoun and Webster also applies equally to them, "they are too big to be

President."

DOINGS OF THE CONVENTION. The results of the labors of the Cincinnati convention are placed before our readers in other columns. While they are a surprise to some and a keen disappointment to others, it must be admitted, on the whole, after due reflection, that they are the sum of the collective wisdom of the Republican party of the nation. We take it from a careful analysis of the vote that the principle which determined the selections was solely one of assurance of final success. It was deemed necessary to carry Ohio at her State election in October. The prestige of victory obtained there would be of incalculable benefit to the party in all the November elections. Governor Hayes, as the first choice of Ohio and as the leader of her forces last year, when victory so proudly perched upon their banners, was naturally suggested as the most popular and desirable leader for the present campaign in that State. Almost the only question from the first in the convention regarding him has been simply whether he should have the first or the second place on the

New York being numerically stronger and in that view more important, as well as more doubtful, naturally claimed to have a right to exercise a large influence in the selection of the man who should lead her forces to victory. She presented Senator Conkling as her "favorite son" and strongest man for the first place on the ticket. It was the opinion of most of the managers that it was of the first importance to name such men as would take both New York and Ohio from the list of doubtful States and place them in the rategory of sure Republican States. It is we'l known that our own judgment was that the names of Conkling and Hayes would have the magic power to accomplish this result. The wisdom of the convention has decreed otherwise, and we acquiesce in the decision. While it has evidently been guided by our theory, it has given Ohio the first and New York the second place on the ticket, and it has given us the name of Hon. William A. Wheeler, instead of Roscoe Conkling. Perhaps the convention has selected the strongest man. We are bound to believe so at all events

A further analysis of the votes shows the true reason of Mr. Blaine's defeat. It does not consist in any lack of confidence in him by the Republican party. It will be seen that nearly one half his strength (130 at least) were cast by delegates from the Southern States and from the several Torritories that could not promise him a single electoral vote in the College, He received no support from those deubtful States in which the contest is to be chiefly waged to the bitter end. Could he have drawn to his support those States. his nomination would have been assured.

But the delegates from those States could not be made to see that the name of Mr. Blaine would inspire the Republicans with the prestige of victory, and they objected to being obliged to fight a desperate battle under leaders of others' choosing.

But the friends of Mr. Blaine made gallant contest for the "Great Commoner" of our day. They adhered to him with a steadfastness and pertinacity which indicates their qualities as good soldiers, and they have the gratification of knowing they were only beaten by the withdrawal of all but one of his rivals, and a concentration of their vote upon that one. We have no doubt that upon due consideration they will come to see that the nomination of their favorite at this time would have been impolitic and weak. The noble conduct of Mr. Blaine, and the elevated sentiments of his dispatch to Gov. Hayes, congratulating him on his success and promising him a hearty and generous support, are worthy of emulation by all of us who have been disappointed. On the whole, it must be agreed the action of the convention has been wise and judicious, and we hail its good temper, good platform and final unanimity as harbingers of victory. "UP GUARDS AND AT THEM."

We select the words of the Iron Duke to his picked men as the motto for this campaign. The platform has been made and the candidates selected. The grand prin ciples of Republicanism have been again enunciated by the chosen delegates of the party; these principles are undying; through them the country has been purified of the dark blot of slavery, and the Declaration of Independence made a living reality; through them the country, after a baptism of blood more terrible than has ever been known, is reunited, prosperous and steadily improving, and only through them and with its Government administered by men thoroughly imbued with them can it continue to improve such men have been chosen, for Rutherford B. Hayes and William A. Wheeler general news of the week, including the are representative Republicans of the best class. The platform speaks for itself. It declares in the first and second resolutions that this is a nation, and its authority as such must be respected. The third resolution declares that the results of the war must be maintained. Honest money, civil service reform, unsectarian schools, a sufficient revenue collected upon correct principles of political economy, homes for the homeless, equal protection to native and foreign-born citizens at home and abroad. no peopage and no polygamy are all distinctly enunciated. Besides these principles affirmed, the platform gives due honor to all the soldiers and sailors who fought for their country, and offers the hand of fellowship to all who fought against it, but abide by the result of the struggle. It returns to President Grant the thanks for his services to the nation that are his just ducs, and arraigns the Democratic party for being "unworthy, recreant and incapable." The platform is right in every particular. The old Republicans who assisted in founding the Republican party can see that it has not departed from the faith of the fathers. It answers every call for reform, and the candidates are worthy of the platform. Then let the watchword of the campaign, so auspiciously begun at Cincinnati, be "Up guards and at them," and let every true Republican of the "old guard" once more don his armor and respond to the cry. Victory will be assured.

ROCK ENON SPRINGS.

No doubt every one who can will visit the Centennial this year, and some may spend all States as candidates worthy the suffrages of | the spare means they have there; yet we feel the people for the highest positions in the assured there are very many of our citizens who must have a change of air and real rest during the heated term, and there is no place they can obtain this so easily, so fully, and at such a moderate expense as at Rock Enon Springs. The proprietor, Mr. A. S. Pratt, is determined to make this lovely spot in the mountains of Virginia, popular for the hosts of people who want pure air, strengthening and healing waters, the best of food in abundance, amusement and recreation, and entire freedom from fashionable restraint and disby reference to another column, is most moderate, less than it costs many who will go there to live at home, while the expense of going and returning is not much more than is paid for an afternoon carriage ride in our city We advise those of our citizens who contemplate a sojourn in the mountains this summer to make early application for rooms. Many have been already engaged, and we know Mr. Pratt will not permit his house to be in any way crowded to the discomfort of his guests.

Hayes is just like the man. In his defeat he shows the same generous, manly spirit he has evinced in his victories. Mr. Daniel Voorhees says that if the Democratic party nominates Tilden, of New York, he will be beaten so disastrously that the party can never recover from the great shock. Although the friends of Mr. Blaine lose by his defeat the Republican party gain by keeping him, as its brilliant and ever-triumphant leader, in the next session of the ex-Confeder ate House.

Should the Democratic party nominate William Allen, of Ohio, for the Presidency, one of the grandest political contests ever recorded in the annals of the Republic would be fought on the soil of the old Buckeye State. Hayes and Wheeler! Two men whose records are as clean as the driven snow; two men against whom none have dared to raise the voice of suspicion, are the standard-bearers who are to lead us on to a triumphant vic-

THE WEEKLY NATIONAL REPUBLICAN IS now ready for delivery, containing the general news of the week, including the proceedings of the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati. It is a cheap and large campaign

Voorhees, the silver-tongued orator of the great West, says that if the Democracy nominates the canal reformer of New York he will bolt the ticket with thousands of other Western men and take the stump for the Republican party.

Yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock Mr. Blaine drove past the telegraph offices, corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, where he was warmly greeted by the assembled multitude, who had gone thither to hear the latest news. Later in the afternoon Mr. Blaine returned and was again greeted by vociferous applause. There is no mistaking the fact that Mr. Blaine had the popular sympathy of the citizens of Washington, as was evinced on the occasions above referred to, when with flushed cheeks and waving hats three cheers and a tiger were given to the demolisher of rebels. Mr. Blaine is cerlainly mighty in his defeat.

The Volks Tribun of January 22, 1876, after discussing the merits of the various candidates for Presidential hopors at Cincinnati, closes with the following: "This is the list of the aspirants for the Presidency, from which, however, one man has been omitted, to whom the palm of victory, in our opinion, will fall, While the above-named prominent candidates will labor in vain in the arena of the national convention, a man will step from the background who, in the coming conflict, will very gradually accumulate votes until he has a majority. This man is the Union general, R. B. Hayes, the present Governor of Ohio, who was victorious to the late brilliant campaign but has otherwise held himself aloof from pol tics and who has proven himself a pre-eminently distinguished man and able official."
